

Heat, drought impacting Lincoln County

By Ben Kleppinger
ben@theinteriorjournal.com

STANFORD — After a week of heat, including four straight days of triple-digit highs, at least three fires and essentially no rainfall, Lincoln County remained under burn and fireworks bans Monday night.

Lincoln County Fire Chief Danny Glass said unless rain shows up in enough force to quench the county's parched earth, the bans will remain in place and the Lincoln County Fair will not feature its traditional July 4 fireworks display.

"We've been holding off as long as we could," Glass said

Monday. "We really hate to spoil anyone's fireworks."

Prior to Lincoln County declaring burn and fireworks bans Monday morning, the cities of Hustonville and Stanford had issued their own burn and fireworks bans last week. Crab Orchard did not issue any bans, and a fireworks display there Friday night went off without incident.

Fourth of July fun isn't the only thing being affected by the recent heat wave, which caused highs of 101 on Thursday, 103 on Friday, 104 on Saturday and 101 on Sunday.

Lincoln County Agricultural Extension Agent

Dan Grigson said the drought conditions in the county are getting to a critical point for several crops, including hay, corn and soy beans.

Even just a little moisture could kick-start hay crops of red clover or alfalfa, but without rain by the coming weekend, corn crops will likely suffer severely. Soy beans have about 10 days left before a lack of rain will damage that crop substantially as well, Grigson said.

With poor crops, farmers will have less feed for their livestock and might be forced to dip into their winter

Independence Day, Crab Orchard style

Hundreds turned out Friday night for the beginning of Crab Orchard's two-day Fourth of July celebration. The fact Independence Day was technically still five days away didn't seem to stop anyone from enjoying the music, dancing, food, games and fireworks.

Lincoln and Garrard considering change in 911 funding

By Ben Kleppinger
ben@theinteriorjournal.com

LANCASTER — If Lincoln and Garrard fiscal courts approve, 911 service for the two counties may soon be paid for by a fee on water bills instead of phone bills.

Bluegrass 911, the joint emergency 911 call center that covers Garrard and Lincoln counties, has been losing income for years as more and more people drop landlines in favor of cell phones.

While landlines are charged several dollars per month for 911 center funding, the money paid to the 911 center by cell phone companies only works out to about 30 cents per phone, board member Daryl Day said.

In order to maintain 911 funding, the proposal on the table is to end the 911 surcharge on landlines and begin charging it on water meters instead.

Day said the change would be more equitable because under the current funding system, landline users — largely older people — are covering far more than their fair share of 911 costs, even though people with cell phones often make far more 911 calls.

In order for Bluegrass 911's plan to take effect, the fiscal courts of Lincoln and Garrard counties have to pass an ordinance removing the phone-line surcharge and implementing a per-water-meter charge expected to be around $2.50.

Garrard County Fiscal Court has passed the first reading of its ordinance; Lincoln Fiscal Court is expected to consider a first reading at its July 10 meeting.

Garrard County Judge-Executive and Bluegrass 911 board member John Wilson said the board believes state law gives the counties authority to move the charge onto water bills, but as an extra precaution, he will be organizing a lawsuit that will cause the relevant state law to be brought before a judge for a ruling.

Day said no one has ever tried to place 911 surcharges on anything except phone lines before.

The lawsuit will allow the counties to either get a ruling giving them "something to stand on" or know before its too late that the courts won't support the move, Day said.

Wilson said it's important to make sure moving the tax to water bills is constitutional because if someone were to sue down the road, even years from now, and the tax was ruled unconstitutional, Bluegrass 911 would have to pay back all the money it had taken in from the tax.

Fish and Wildlife enforcing Cedar Creek beach closure

By Ben Kleppinger
ben@theinteriorjournal.com

CRAB ORCHARD — Lincoln residents hoping to beat the heat with a visit to the beach on Cedar Creek Lake will now have to find somewhere else to cool off.

While the beach has been closed and swimming prohibited for years, the closure has not been enforced and the small sandy shore near U.S. 150 is regularly visited by many people.

But beginning a few days ago, state Fish and Wildlife officials began enforcing the closure, telling beachgoers the beach is closed.

John Williams with Fish and Wildlife said several recent incidents involving law enforcement at the beach and lake caused the crackdown.

Trash has been an issue at the beach, and there have also been problems with the location being used as a "party spot," Williams said.

Stolen Valor ruling win for speech

By Ken Paulson
First Amendment Center

Last Thursday’s Supreme Court decision in United States v. Alvarez is a victory for free speech and common sense.

The Supreme Court in a 6-to-3 vote struck down the Stolen Valor Act, which made it a crime to falsely claim military honors. The Court concluded that the act violated the First Amendment by criminalizing lies without a showing of fraud or other criminal conduct.

“Permitting the government to decree this speech to be a criminal offense, whether shouted from the rooftops or made in a barely audible whisper, would endorse government authority to compile a list of subjects about which false statements are punishable. That governmental power has no clear limiting principal. Our constitutional tradition stands against the idea that we need Oceania’s Ministry of Truth,” Justice Anthony Kennedy wrote in the plurality opinion.

That reference to George Orwell’s novel 1984 is appropriate. The Stolen Valor Act would have given government the right to weigh the truth or falsity of someone’s statement and prosecute the person even if no one had been defrauded and the liar had obtained no material benefits.

Xavier Alvarez, the defendant in the case, has quite a track record of lying. He once claimed to have played hockey for the Detroit Red Wings and to have married a starlet. But those paled in comparison to his biggest lie: claiming to have been awarded the Medal of Honor.

That’s when he ran afoul of the Stolen Valor Act, which proponents claimed would uphold the honor of those who legitimately received the medal.

But the law ran afoul of the Constitution by requiring no more than an untruthful statement about military honors, regardless of setting, audience or whether the liar intended to defraud.

The Supreme Court reviewed the rare instances in which mere speech can lead to prosecution in this country. Content-based limits on free expression are tied to criminal fraud, perjury, incitement of violence or defamation of others. Self-aggrandizement is not on the list.

“A public database of Medal of Honor winners would have much the same deterrent effect as this flawed law,” Kennedy noted. People claiming honors they didn’t earn could be quickly exposed, and liars would face the appropriate penalty: public humiliation.

If Congress wants to pursue punishment of false military claims, it need only redraft the law so that it includes a requirement of defrauding for personal gain. That allows prosecution of the con artist and not the bar-room braggart.

As Kennedy points out, “Were this law to be sustained, there could be an endless list of subjects that national government or the states could single out.”

The Court refused to embrace the government’s theory that lies, without more, could be criminalized. Today’s decision keeps 1984 in the past and not the future.

50 years later, how school-prayer ruling changed U.S.

Fifty years ago this week, on June 25, 1962, the U.S. Supreme Court declared school-sponsored prayers unconstitutional in the landmark case Engel v. Vitale.

Public outrage was immediate and widespread. For millions of Americans, the Court had “kicked God out of the schools,” to use a phrase that has entered the culture-war lexicon.

Five decades later, Engel continues to be reviled by a good number of televangelists and politicians who take every opportunity to rail against the “godless public schools.” Eliminating school-sponsored prayer, they argue, set America on the road to moral and spiritual ruin.

Over the years, the absence of “school prayer” has been linked to almost every social ill, from schoolhouse shootings to drug addiction.

INSIDE THE FIRST AMENDMENT

Charles C. Haynes
Guest columnist

One popular YouTube video asks why God doesn’t do something about the terrible things happening to our students in public schools – and a deep voice replies in ominous tones, “I am not allowed in schools.”

That the high court’s prayer ruling is to blame for America’s decline makes a compelling narrative, raising millions of dollars for advocacy groups year after year.

But here’s the catch: It isn’t true.

Let’s start by stating the obvious: The moral state of the union can’t be correlated to the frequency of government prayers in schools or anywhere else. After all, in the era of daily teacher-led prayers, America had any number of social ills, including segregated public schools.

Just as it would be absurd to blame teacher-led prayer for racism or other moral failures in the 1950s, it makes no sense to blame the absence of such prayers for our moral failures today.

But the Big Lie in the school-prayer debate is the false charge that the Supreme Court expelled God or eliminated praying from public schools. In reality, the Court has never banned prayers in schools – in Engel or in any other decision.

Instead, the Court ruled that, under the establishment clause of the First Amendment, “it is no part of the business of government to compose official prayers for any group of the American people to recite as a part of a religious program carried on by government.”

In other words, state-sponsored prayers in schools are unconstitutional. Students, on the other hand, are fully free to pray in public schools – alone or in groups, as long as they don’t disrupt the school or interfere with the rights of others.

It’s true that in the aftermath of the Engel decision, some school administrators took things too far by prohibiting constitutionally protected student religious expression. Of course, other administrators and school boards practiced civil disobedience by continuing school-sponsored religious practices in defiance of the Court’s ruling.

But in recent decades, most public school officials have begun to get religion – and prayer – right. They (finally) understand the difference between government speech promoting religion – which the establishment clause prohibits – and student religious speech, which the free-exercise and free-speech clauses protect.

Visit most public schools today and you are likely to see students praying around the flagpole, attending religious club meetings, giving each other religious literature, saying grace before lunch, talking about their faith in class discussions and in other ways expressing their religious convictions.

In fact, there is more student religious expression in public schools today than at any time since the 19th century. Far from being “kicked out,” God goes to school today through the First Amendment door.

Critics of the Court’s ruling in Engel v. Vitale do have one thing right: The decision changed America – just not in the way they think.

Gone are the days when one faith (historically Protestant Christianity) dominated the public schools and the public square. Today, thanks in no small measure to Engel, we are closer than ever to the full religious freedom envisioned by the First Amendment – a level playing field for people of all faiths and none.

An encouraging word The solid foundation

By Howard Coop

Independence Day, always celebrated on July 4, should be a significant day for every loyal citizen of the United States of America. Since 1776, the day has been enthusiastically celebrated throughout this land with flourishes of oratory, big parades and dazzling displays of fireworks. This celebrating is the response of grateful citizens who appreciate the work of the 56 Founding Fathers who risked their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor to prepare and sign the Declaration of Independence.

The Declaration of Independence is a short document with long and lasting effects. That document broke relations between Great Britain and the thirteen original American colonies and became, as Abraham Lincoln said at Gettysburg, the foundation of “a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.”

Beyond the oratory, the parades, and the fireworks, there is another, and maybe, a more meaningful way to experience the significance of Independence Day. This special day can, and should, be observed with a period of quiet reflection upon the Declaration of Independence and its significance. This noble document, 236 years old, is short; it contains a mere 1,346 words that can be read in a few minutes. But those powerful words say much to those who take the time to read and think about them.

This historic document affirms that all persons “are created equal.” Therefore, no one has a superior rank. Everyone is “endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights,” and “Governments are instituted among men” to secure these rights. These governments derive “their just powers from the consent of the governed.” When “any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or abolish it, and to institute a new Government.” Then, there is an underlying principle: “Prudence, indeed, will dictate, that Governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes.”

These basic principles are the solid foundation of our country. So may it ever be.

Fairview Baptist Church news

Bro. Johnny Baker's message on Sunday was about the glory of God - last week's being God's majesty. He said if we were to see God's glory, he could not believe it would not change us, and bring us to humility, obedience and service to him.

Isaiah leads us to this point better than any other writer in the bible. Bro. Johnny referred to Isaiah 6: 3-5. In these verses, the writer describes the throne of God around which seraphims were flying, crying "holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of hosts; the whole earth is full of his glory." The posts of the door moved, and the house was filled with smoke.

When we meet our savior in heaven, we will want to praise him, why wouldn't we want to now? Bro. Johnny asked

All created things shout the existence of our creator, Bro. Johnny said.

Weather systems, great hurricanes, the orbit and angle of its axis to the sun (23 degrees), are only a few of the wonders, he said. How could even a lost person not see the glory and the power of God? There are 140 billion galaxies in the universe, and our solar system is only a tiny part of one of them. No one could keep the universe in sync like God does.

Bro. Johnny cited another throne scene: Rev. 4, and another in Rev. 20, in which the book of life is opened. Verse 15: "And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire." If your name is there, you have met the conditions to be there. You cannot fool God, he said. No one is perfect, but we must change, we must be free from what used to enslave us, sin. (End of sermon summary)

Stanford Nazarene Church news

By Buford Edwards II

Sunday morning, Stanford Church of the Nazarene was blessed by the wonderful worship service and challenged by the Word of God as Bro. Buford brought the message on the subject of "False Prophets Among Us" from 2 Peter 2 and we concluded the service with the taking of the Lord's table. On Sunday night, as Bro. Buford preached regarding the question "What Is Our Role" from Romans 12.

Come out Wednesday night for Christian Education Night. Our kids meet weekly and our adult class dubbed, "The Book" club is currently working through the book of Revelation. This week we will finish our reading in Rev. 17. Read up and join us for Bible study as we continue to discuss "The Judgment of Babylon" as well as the verse of the week: Rev. 17:8 (KJV): The beast that thou sawest was, and is not; and shall ascend out of the bottomless pit, and go into perdition: and they that dwell on the earth shall wonder, whose names were not written in the book of life from the foundation of the world, when they behold the beast that was, and is not, and yet is.

Thought for the week: Although the antichrist and Babylon will seem invincible and a powerful force, in the end God is in control and as the Beast came from the bottomless pit, he shall end up in the lake of fire with Babylon and all those, whose names were not written in the Book of Life, with him.

Hebron Lakeside holds VBS

This summer, Hebron Lakeside Church celebrated Vacation Bible School each Wednesday night for six weeks. As they focused on Knowing Christ, they learned that Jesus is the Good Shepherd. Matthew Anderson brought his ram, Wendell, to meet the children and help them understand what a shepherd does for the sheep.

Jesus crossed the lake before and after feeding the 5,000. Likewise, when the children learned that Jesus is the Bread of Life, they enjoyed a pontoon boat ride on Cedar Creek Lake, compliments of Bud, Chris and Paul Wyler and George and Barbara Reynolds.

A biblical character, who looked a bit like John Holtzclaw, shared the story of The Last Supper as everybody sat on the floor around the table.

Each week was fun for everybody as they explored a different experience in the life of Jesus.

For the final evening, everybody gathered around a well to hear a Samaritan woman share her story. Afterward, everybody got soaked while playing water games.

We’re grateful for all the people who worked (with music, crafts, music, leading, decorating, etc.) to

At top, a pontoon ride on Cedar Creek Lake helped the children relate to the story about Jesus crossing the lake after feeding the 5,000. Bible school attendees above participated in an example of The Last Supper, as they heard a story depicting The Last Supper. News from Pleasant View Baptist Church

By Martha Roberts

“Blessed is the nation whose God is the LORD; and the people whom He hath chosen for his own inheritance.” Psalm 33:12 (KJV). This verse set the tone for a glorious day of worship of our God and a day of honoring the nation with which we have been blessed. The service began with congregational singing of “The Battle Belongs to the LORD” and continued with the patriotic songs “America the Beautiful,” and “My Country ‘tis of Thee”. The choir presented the song “I Love This Land” with a solo beautifully performed by Josh Jacobs.

Bro. Kyle began his sermon by quoting from the preamble to the Declaration of Independence, “We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.” He then pointed out that one’s happiness does not depend on circumstances, his works, his things, or other people. He quoted Tullian Tchividjian “Jesus plus Nothing equals Everything.” True happiness is found in knowing God. He posed the question “Can we see Christ in your pursuit of happiness”?

We were blessed in the morning service by having the congregation of Polly

Ann Baptist Church as our guests. Bro. Terry Holt, pastor of Polly Ann Baptist, gave a brief personal testimony and explained his vision of ministering to the children in the area of his church. Bro. Kyle then presented him with keys to a van donated by Pleasant View Baptist to be used in fulfilling this ministry.

Bro. Jamie Lawrence, his wife, Elisha, and his daughter, Kaylee came forward to become members of Pleasant View Baptist. Bro. Jamie will be the Associate Pastor-Music and Education. We are delighted to have Bro. Jamie, Elisha, Kaylee and Kellis join us and we look forward to worshiping and working with them.

Garrett Robertson, son of Chad and Joy, also came forward and made a profession of faith. We rejoice with him and his family in his decision.

Bro. Jerry Hampton was recognized for his service as interim Minister of Music. It has been a pleasure to work with Jerry and Rita and we look forward to continuing to worship with them.

At 4 p.m., A Patriotic Celebration, I Love This Land, was held under the direction of Bro. Jerry. It was an inspiring service with the Presentation of Colors conducted by the American Legion, Post #18, a slide presentation of veterans, testimonies from veterans from World War II, Jess Clarkson, and from the Vietnam War, Lynn Young. The patriotic musical, “I Love This Land,” was presented by a choir from Lincoln County Association of Churches. The keynote speaker was Sam Hinkson, pastor of Gilead Baptist Church, who had served in Afghanistan.

Mark and Josh Wilson are currently in Puerto Rico on a mission trip sponsored by Sportsreach. Please keep them in your prayers as they are serving in this venture.

On July 15, a group from our church will be leaving for a mission trip to Charleston, W. Va., and will return on July 20. An organizational meeting will be held July 8 at 5 p.m. See Bro. Kyle for more information.

The food pantry is in need of spaghetti and spaghetti sauce, canned fruits, peanut butter, crackers, tomato sauce, canned meats, canned vegetables (no corn or green beans) and cereal.

Dates to remember: July 8 – Fellowship Supper; July 15-20 West Virginia Mission Trip; and July 22-25 Crossing’s Kid Camp.

Thought for the week: “We recognize no Sovereign but God, and no King but Jesus.” John Adams and John Hancock, Founding Fathers (April 18, 1775)

Protect yourself from melanoma

By Charles Crase, M.D.

Melanoma is the most serious type of skin cancer, with more than 50,000 people in the U.S. diagnosed each year. It is one of the most common cancers in young adults ages 25-29, and can be life-threatening. If it is not found early, it can grow deeper into the skin and spread to other parts of the body, at which point it is difficult to treat. The good news, though, is that if melanoma is found and treated in its early stages, the chances of recovery are very high.

Melanoma begins in skin cells called melanocytes, which produces the skin pigment melanin. Melanin also protects the deeper layers of the skin from the sun's harmful ultraviolet rays. When you spend time outside in the sun, or when you are exposed to other forms of ultraviolet light such as in a tanning bed, your melanocytes make more melanin, which causes your skin to tan. If your skin receives too much ultraviolet light, the melanocytes can begin growing abnormally. This creates cancerous cells.

Often, the first sign of melanoma is a change in size, shape or color of a mole. It can also appear on the body as a new mole. In women, melanoma often develops on the lower legs, while in men it tends to show up on the upper body, between the shoulders and hips or on the head and neck. Individuals with dark skin will often see the first signs of melanoma under their fingernails or toenails, on the palms of their hands or on the soles of their feet. Melanoma can occur anywhere on the skin, however, which makes it important for you to perform a regular full examination of your skin to check for new or changed moles.

While anyone exposed to a lot of sunlight or ultraviolet radiation is at risk for melanoma, some people are subject to more risk factors than others. Even if you are dark-skinned or tan without burning, you are at risk of melanoma. The disease sometimes runs in families, so if you have two or more close relatives who have had melanoma, you have an increased risk of developing it yourself. Additionally, increased risk of melanoma is associated with certain mole patterns or having more than 50 ordinary moles.

Medications that might weaken the immune system can increase your risk, as can a history of severe and blistering sunburns in your youth. Practice good sunscreen habits to protect yourself. If you notice a change in an old mole, or find a new mole that has developed, contact your health care provider to have it examined.

Bushes decorate the edges of a sidewalk in the new park taking shape in downtown Crab Orchard on land that had been contaminated by years of use as a scrap yard.

Old scrap yard site turning green

Formerly contaminated land in Crab Orchard now landscaped, walkable

CRAB ORCHARD — After seven years of dealing with contaminated land left behind by a scrap yard along Crab Orchard's main thoroughfare, the scenery across from city hall is looking a little greener.

But the city's mayor isn't saying anything about it — at least not yet.

The former salvage yard property, previously prohibited from use by the EPA, has been transformed into the beginnings of a park, with young plants growing in landscaped areas, a walking path and a basketball court.

Records from the EPA show Crab Orchard received a $200,000 grant in 2010 for clean-up of a former scrap metal site, but Mayor Billy Shelton declined to discuss the changes, how they were made possible or what role the grant played.

Shelton told a Crab Orchard city hall employee to tell the Interior Journal he wanted to wait until an official ribbon-cutting ceremony before he talked about the park.

No date has been set for the ribbon-cutting.

In 2005, Cecil King closed his scrap yard business, a decades-old mainstay of downtown Crab Orchard, and gifted the land to the city.

King received a $400,000 tax-deductible write-off for the donation, and the city got a piece of property it had eyed for a while.

But after Crab Orchard took ownership, the Kentucky Department of Environmental Regulation and the Environmental Protection Agency determined that the soil on the property was contaminated with many different toxic and dangerous chemicals, including polycyclic hydrocarbon chemicals, known as PAHs, that are often produced by motor vehicle components.

The EPA ruled the site could not be used until the contamination was cleaned up through the removal of several feet of topsoil and covering of the land with fresh, safe soil or pavement.

Without money for the expensive clean-up, Crab Orchard couldn't fulfill the requirements to make the land usable again, but the site was made part of the EPA's Brownfields Program, according to newspaper archives.

The EPA Brownfields Program identifies and works to restore contaminated sites so they can be used again, and provides various grants to make that restoration possible.

Crab Orchard had applied for but failed to receive a Brownfields grant in 2009, but was applying again that year, according to newspaper archives. The $200,000 Brownfields grant for cleanup was awarded in 2010.

Several landscaped areas on the previously contaminated land across from Crab Orchard city hall feature bushes and other plants.

Man involved in off-road chase indicted in Lincoln

By Ben Kleppinger
ben@theinteriorjournal.com

STANFORD — A Pulaski County man who led authorities on an off-road pursuit up a creek May 31 was indicted June 22 by a Lincoln County grand jury.

Rodney H. Davis, of 3790 Ky. 70 in Eubank, faces one count of possession of a handgun by a felon, one count of possession of a firearm by a convicted felon, two counts of first-degree criminal mischief and one count of second-degree fleeing and evading police.

Pulaski Sheriff John Wood told The Interior Journal June 1 that a pair of his deputies were helping a probation and parole officer locate Davis, who was wanted for violating his parole.

After one of the deputies spotted Davis in a pickup truck, Davis fled, driving along roads and going off-road multiple times along the Lincoln and Pulaski county line, Wood said.

Davis drove his truck up a creek before a Pulaski deputy side-swiped his vehicle, forcing him to stop.

Davis was initially jailed for violating his parole. Wood said at the time that a handgun and a rifle were found in Davis' truck and the Pulaski Sheriff's Office would be working with the Lincoln County Commonwealth's attorney on charges relating to the pursuit because it occurred in Lincoln County.

Broken Horn RODEO

THERE WAS A LOT of red clay being kicked up on the motorsports track at the Lincoln County Fairgrounds Monday night with the Broken Horn Rodeo making its annual stop at the Lincoln County Fair. The rodeo show provided plenty of action with bareback riding, saddle bronc riding, calf roping, team roping, steer wrestling, barrel racing, bull riding and even a little stickhorse racing. Scott Conlee of Winchester prepares to rope a calf, above. At right, the bull Rusty Nail bucks one way and his rider, Rick Bynum of Charlotte, N.C., goes the other during the bull riding competition. The bulls beat the cowboys 9-0. Below, Bruce Boman of Stanford, tries to heel a calf as team roping partner Jamie Ballard of Nicholasville watches. The broncs and bulls were cleared out of the ring midway of the rodeo to make room for the Broken Horn Rodeo's youngest fans, pictured at bottom, to come out of the stands and race for prizes in stickhorse races.

Kentucky Afield Outdoors:

Establish small plots of clover to improve deer, turkey hunting

FRANKFORT, Ky. — Establishing small plots of clover throughout your hunting area can pay big dividends during deer and wild turkey seasons.

Summer is a good time to start preparations for an initial planting in the fall.

“If managed correctly, stands of clover can last for three to five years without re-seeding,” said Chris Grascch, a private lands biologist who works in the Bluegrass Region for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. “Plots can be as small as ¼- to ½-acre in size and should be located where there’s full sun at least part of the day.”

Clover needs to be mowed periodically, at least once a year, and doesn’t thrive in shady areas. This perennial cool-season legume helps increase soil fertility and provides an almost year-round source of high quality forage for deer. Clover starts growing in the early spring and lasts until it is killed back by the heaviest frosts of late fall.

The first step in this habitat improvement project is to find the right area to establish a plot and prepare the soil for planting.

Secluded woods openings are especially attractive to deer because they feel safe feeding there in the late afternoons, offering good opportunities for close shots.

One option is to locate the plot at the edge of a field or existing opening that deer are already using. Make sure your tree stand or ground blind can be located within easy shooting range.

A second option, which is especially important for bow hunting deer, is creating a wildlife opening between heavy cover, where deer are known to bed, and the travel routes they take through adjacent woodlands.

Pick a level spot with decent soil fertility. Old fields covered with weeds, brush or small trees can be cleared using hand tools, a chainsaw or mower. A tiller can also be used to prepare the area for planting.

If the area is covered with fescue, Grascch recommends using herbicide to kill back the tall grass.

“If the site already has some clover, there are herbicides available that will kill the fescue without harming the clover,” he said.

A chemical-free option is solarization, which uses the heat of the sun to kill the grass, vegetation or weed seeds in the soil. On a sunny summer day, place sheets of clear plastic on the ground and weigh them down with rocks on each corner. The extreme heat that develops under the plastic will kill grass and weeds down to their roots in a few days.

Conduct a soil test to measure the nutrient levels — nitrogen (N), phosphorus (P), and potassium (K) — and pH level (acidity) of the soil. Soil test kits are available at most farm stores. Follow directions carefully.

Consider using 10-10-10, a formulation commonly available in 50-pound bags, if fertilizer needs to be added to your plot. Both fertilizer and agricultural lime are available in pellet form for easy application with a hand-crank spreader.

“If fertilizer needs to be added to the site, I suggest cutting the amount in half from what is recommended for crop production,” said Grascch. “But don’t skimp on the amount of lime that is recommended; low pH is usually the issue with our soils.”

Winter wheat is a good choice for an initial planting in the fall because it’s high protein is easily digestible by wildlife and makes a good nurse crop for clover. It grows best when the soil has a pH of 5.8 to 6.5.

“Winter wheat should be planted from Aug. 15 to Oct. 15 and you might try mixing in some clover seed,” said Grascch. “I recommend planting ladino (white) with some medium red clover.”

Clover can also be planted the following year in February or early March. Seed can be spread on a cover of light snow, or in advance of light rain or snow. The freezing and thawing action helps the seed move down into the soil so it can germinate and become established quickly.

Use these long summer days to plant a patch of clover and improve your deer hunting this fall.

Drought management must do’s

The rains the last couple of weeks have been great. However, we are not out of the drought yet. Even if we were to catch up on the rain, then we still have the consequences of the spring and early summer drought conditions hanging around until next spring. Between the April drought and the current drought our hay supply is very low. Our pastures have not been productive for three weeks. Most of our pastures are fescue and orchardgrass based and since both of these grasses are of the cool season type then they haven’t grown because air temperatures have been above 80 degrees and it hasn’t rained any to cool the soil down to keep them growing. These cool season grasses usually only grow good March 10 - June 10. That’s why we encourage you to add red clover and Alfalfa to pastures as they grow in summer. The end result has been low production which has led to overgrazing which will lead to our pastures being less productive next year unless we do some work on them this fall and winter.

For now I want to share with you some ways to manage the beef herd now and for the months ahead.

- Feed hay and silage now. Pull cattle into one pasture and sacrifice it. Don’t destroy all your pastures by overgrazing. Start feeding cows on full feed of hay or silage and do that until the pasture have grown back to 10 inches tall. I know it’s your winter feed but the “momma” cows need to produce milk for the calf to grow for you to have pounds to sell. Don’t sacrifice calf gains and income, feed them hay now.

- Summer Creep Feeding
One of the most profitable times to creep feed calves is during a summer drought. The decision to creep calves centers around whether the cost of creep feeding is less than the value added to the calf at sales time. There is a variety of rations that can be fed to calves. Since forage availability is low, then you should use a high energy creep. Once the calves are consuming a pound, or more of creep feed, use a 5-10 percent salt mixture to limit consumption. Watch the consumption and adjust the salt mix to meet your target consumption. The best economic advantage for creep feeding comes when you creep feed just the 45 days prior to weaning, so select your weaning date and start creep feeding 45 days before.

- Early Weaning-Early weaning can help both the cow and calf during drought periods. At four months of age, the calf is getting only 20-40 percent of its energy requirement from the cow. Early weaned calves fed in a drylot or supplemented on pasture can gain 0.5 to 1.0 pounds faster than nursing calves.

Early weaning allows for two things. First the nutritional requirements for the cows are reduced by one third to one half when the calves are weaned. Cows can now be moved to lower quality forages or be culled and sold. This also allows the calves to be moved to the remaining high-quality forage. Better forage coupled with supplemental creep feeding will allow calves to achieve necessary growth needed at sale time. I suggest you take a hard look at late July or early August weaning of your calves.

- Smart Herd Reduction-When feed resources are getting short, one solution is to critically evaluate the members of the herd and eliminate those that are not working but are using up your resources. Critically evaluate the physical attributes of the individual cows. Consider culling those cows with bad physical attributes-udders, legs, eyes, etc. Cull the cows on their reproduction efficiency. Palpate the herd and cull the open cows. Next, look at your records and cull those cows who have not calved every 12 months or are extremes (too early or too late) in your breeding and calving season.

Critically evaluate the replacement heifer crop. Decide what is the minimum number of heifers you will need next year and sell the rest. Also, evaluate your bulls. If they are getting old and need to be replaced, sell them now and plan on purchasing a better bull before next breeding season.

- Parasite Control-Cattle under nutritional and heat stress are less resistant to parasites than under normal conditions. Strategic deworming during a drought will relieve some of the nutritional stress on the animal and “clean up” the herd for the fall and winter. There are many dewormers on the market that come in various forms: mixed in salt and supplements, injectable, pour-on, bolus, paste or drench. Consult your veterinarian for help developing a quality health program.

- Herd Segregation-Heifers and calves are not able to compete with mature cattle for pasture or supplemental feed. Drought feed is costly and it is important to feed only those animals who really need it. Segregating animals gives each class a better chance of getting needed feed supplies. Vulnerable classes can be segregated and given preferential treatment. The older dry cows can be moved to the poorer forage fields.

Summer watering tips

When summer weather heats up with no sign of rain, gardeners hook up the water hose to give their thirsty landscapes a drink. It seems like a simple enough task, but there are some tips to help you get the most from your efforts.

Plants benefit more from occasional heavy watering than from frequent shallow watering. Water equal to about one inch of rain penetrates the soil to a depth of about six inches which is enough to sustain most plants for a week. Light watering generally wets the soil to a depth of only an inch or less. This top inch of soil may hold some of the plant’s roots, but it will dry very rapidly. That means the water is not available to the plant for very long. It is much more effective to water less frequently and more thoroughly. During hot weather, some plants will wilt toward the end of the day – this is normal even if the soil has enough moisture. Look at plants in the morning for signs of drought stress (wilting, cupping of leaves, rolling of grass blades) and apply water when these signs are present. Wait until the next morning if you only see these signs at night.

When you need to water your landscape, use a hose attachment to apply water to the base of the plant. A nozzle with multiple settings breaks the water into finer droplets that soak more easily into the soil. Apply water for several minutes before moving the hose to the next area. You can check with a hand spade to see how far down the soil has gotten moist. Try to apply enough water to soak to a depth of six inches. Soaker or drip hoses also are an efficient and effective way to water large areas. Plan to run this type of irrigation system for several hours to accomplish a thorough watering.

Morning is the best time to take care of any overhead watering. This gives wet foliage a chance to dry in the sun. Flowers, leaves and stems that stay wet for several hours can have a higher incidence of disease.

For more information about caring for your home landscape and gardens, contact your Lincoln County Cooperative Extension Service at 104 Metker Trail in Stanford.

FSA now accepting pollinator habitats in CCRP

Kentucky USDA Farm Service Agency (FSA) State Executive Director John W. McCauley, announced that pollinator habitats, which support a variety of pollinator species, will now be accepted as a Continuous Sign-up Conservation Reserve Program (CCRP) practice. CCRP is a voluntary program that helps producers apply conservation practices to safeguard environmentally sensitive land.

Pollinator habitats are areas of permanent vegetation located in an agricultural landscape: field edges, field middles, odd corners, or any agricultural location that is suitable for establishing pollinator habitat.

Pollinators provide a very important ecological service. Approximately three quarters of all flowering plants rely upon external assistance to pollinate their flowers. In addition to agricultural crops such as fruits and many vegetables, these plants include seed producing wildflowers, fruit producing shrubs and nut producing trees which provide a source of food for many wildlife species. Studies indicate that birds, bees, bats, and other pollinators are in significant decline across the country and around the world. Nearly 80 percent of the crops grown in the world require pollination. In the United States, insects pollinate crops that producer $40 billion worth of products annually.

Participants of newly enrolled pollinator habitat practices are eligible to receive a $150 CRP Sign-up Incentive Payment (SIP) per acre. The SIP is a one-time payment issued to CRP participants after the contract is approved. The following practices qualify for the $150 SIP:

- *Pollinator Habitats;
- *Wetland Restoration and Wetland Restoration (non-floodplain) practice which restores the functions and values of wetland ecosystems that have been devoted to agricultural use and;

- *Habitat Buffers for Upland Birds practice which provides food and cover for quail and

- *upland birds in cropland areas

The SIP for all other continuous sign-up practices remains unchanged at $100 per acre.

Continuous CRP sign-up allows participants to submit offers for selected CCRP practices to enroll in CRP at anytime instead of waiting for a General CRP sign-up period. Participants and offered lands must meet certain eligibility requirements to be accepted into the program.

For more information about the continuous conservation reserve program, please contact your local FSA office or visit www.fsa.usda.gov.

New law to protect agritourism operators, participants

A new state law will provide Kentucky agritourism destinations with limited liability protection when it takes effect on July 11.

The law requires venues such as wineries, orchards, and corn mazes to warn visitors that they are assuming the risk of participating in the activities of the operation. The law, filed as House Bill 440, was passed by the General Assembly and signed into law earlier this year.

“Agritourism operations provide customers the opportunity to have fun on the farm while at the same time educating them about Kentucky’s farm heritage,” Agriculture Commissioner James Comer said. “However, customers need to understand that there are inherent risks in any agritourism activity.

“This law protects agritourism participants and operators. We want people to have fun on Kentucky farms in a safe manner, and we want our farmers to take every precaution to keep their customers safe.”

The law creates a new section of KRS 247.800 to 247.810 requiring agritourism attractions to post an 18-by-24-inch warning sign stating that, in the absence of operator negligence: “You are assuming the risk of participating in this agritourism activity.” The law provides limited liability protection if the injury or death of a participant results from the inherent risks of the agritourism activity and/or in the absence of negligence.

If the agritourism operation chooses not to post a sign, the law requires the operator to show a written warning to participants and have them sign a waiver releasing the farm from liability should an injury or death occur.

“We’re encouraging our agritourism operators to do both,” Kentucky Agritourism Director Ben Shaffar said. “Farm families operating agritourism activities need to know that the new law doesn’t prohibit lawsuits; it just provides a layer of protection in the event of a litigious situation. It’s also in no way a substitute for insurance.

“Liability is the No. 1 inhibitor for farmers looking to diversify into agritourism. We hope this law will be a new catalyst for growth in Kentucky.”

After Indiana passed a similar law last summer, that state received more than 100 applications for new agritourism operations, Shaffar said. Kentucky currently has more than 350 agritourism operations in its Kentucky Farms Are Fun program, which is the official state agritourism marketing program.

Previous attempts to turn the bill into a law failed in 2004 and 2006. North Carolina, Tennessee, and Virginia passed similar laws to protect their agritourism operators from lawsuits.

“This law has been 11 years in the making,” Commissioner Comer said. “On behalf of our agritourism operators, I want to thank the legislators who sponsored this bipartisan bill, Rep. Mike Denham (D-Maysville) and Sen. Jimmy Higdon (R-Lebanon).”

Agritourism operators may purchase the plastic warning signs from the Kentucky Department of Agriculture at cost for $1.75 each. For more information, contact Shaffar at ben.shaffar@ky.gov or (502) 564-4983, extension 223.

Customer Deposits

Text change states when Rate GS deposit may be waived in conjunction with taking service under Rate RS.

Kentucky Utilities Company proposes to change the text of the following electric tariffs: General Service Rate GS, All Electric School Rate AES, Power Service Rate PS, Time-of-Day Secondary Service Rate TODS, Time-of-Day Primary Service Rate TODP, Retail Transmission Service Rate RTS, Fluctuating Load Service Rate FLS, Street Lighting Service Rate ST. LT, Private Outdoor Lighting Rate P.O.LT, Cable Television Attachment Charges Rate CTAC, Curtable Service Rider CSR10, Curtable Service Rider CSR30, Excess Facilities Rider EF, Redundant Capacity Rider RC, Supplemental/Standby Service Rider SS, Rider IL for Intermittent Loads, Temporary/Seasonal Service Rider TS, Large Green Energy Rider LGE, Low Emission Vehicle Service Rate LEV, Fuel Adjustment Clause FAC, Demand Side Management Cost Recovery Mechanism DSM, Environmental Cost Recovery Surcharge ECR, and the Terms and Conditions.

Changes to the Terms and Conditions include proposed clarifications on terms and conditions for determining customer rate assignments, as well as when standby or supplemental service must be purchased if customer desires non-firm service.

Although KU is not proposing to change the text of its Fuel Adjustment Clause ("FAC"), other than the correction of a minor typographical error in Paragraph (3), it is proposing to recover certain costs through the FAC to ensure that the correct amounts are collected through base rates and the FAC.

Complete copies of the proposed tariffs containing text changes and proposed rates may be obtained by contacting Lonnie E. Bellar, Kentucky Utilities Company at 220 West Main Street, Louisville, Kentucky, 502-627-4830, or visiting Kentucky Utilities Company's website at www.lge-ku.com.

The Fair

THE 2012 LINCOLN COUNTY FAIR opened its gates Monday night to kick off a six-day run of rides, contests, exhibits, sports track action, food and fun. At left, Holstein exhibitor Andy Bratcher brings his entry in under the flags for the first night of dairy shows in the Matheny Livestock Pavilion. Trophies and ribbons like the ones below will be handed out hundreds of times during the run of the fair. The fair continues through Saturday, with plenty of truck and tractor pulls, beef shows, horseshoe contests, talent shows, food and more still to come.

THE LINCOLN COUNTY Fair is open to kids of all ages, like Linton Hubble, at left. Hubble served as the "hammer man" during Monday afternoon's FFA, 4-H and Adult Tractor Driving contests, replacing posts pushed over by competitors who veered slightly off course during their turns at the wheel. Hubble, who competed in the state tractor driving contest in 1964, did not compete in Monday's contest. Below, the mother/daughter duo of Heather Petrey, left, and Gayle Miracle waves to the crowd after being named the winners of the annual Mother/Daughter Look-A-Like contest. Petrey and Miracle, both of Stanford, were chosen out of eight other mother/daughter couples. Dale Mayberry and his son David were the lone entrants for Father/Son Look-A-Likes.
